

«Eagle» 1932 («Eagle»)

Eagle-White

Eagle 1932 (Eagle)

Eagle 1932 \(Eagle\)

Eagle 1932 (Eagle) is a semi-automatic handgun designed by John Browning. It is a compact, pocket-sized handgun that was widely used by law enforcement and military forces. The Eagle is known for its reliability and accuracy. It features a single-action trigger and a magazine capacity of 7 rounds. The handgun is made of stainless steel and is available in both single-action and double-action configurations. The Eagle is a popular choice for those who want a reliable and accurate handgun in a compact size.

Eagle 1932 (Eagle) is a semi-automatic handgun designed by John Browning. It is a compact, pocket-sized handgun that was widely used by law enforcement and military forces. The Eagle is known for its reliability and accuracy. It features a single-action trigger and a magazine capacity of 7 rounds. The handgun is made of stainless steel and is available in both single-action and double-action configurations. The Eagle is a popular choice for those who want a reliable and accurate handgun in a compact size.

Technical specifications:
Caliber: .30 Mauser (7.63x25mm Mauser);
Action: Single-action / Double-action;
Magazine capacity: 7 rounds;
Weight: 1.40 kg (3.12 lbs);
Length: 140 mm (5.51 in);
Height: 100 mm (3.94 in);
Width: 20 mm (0.79 in).

^

Eagle 1932 \(Eagle\)